- Albert Einstein gave us this definition of insanity: “doing the same thing over and over again and expecting different results.”

For Different Results: Engage your Families

- Engagement vs Involvement

Four Domains of Family Engagement

- Domain 1 - Welcoming Environment
- Domain 2 - Two-Way Communication
- Domain 3 - Degree of Engagement
- Domain 4 - Support for Learning at Home

Welcoming Environment

- (By the Way: They're just as afraid to come to school and talk with you as you are to have them come to school)
- Ideas for a Welcoming Environment
 - Coffee breaks at school or home
 - Tuesday Tours
 - Lunch with your kids once a month
 - What would you do to get to know a new neighbor? How would you build a relationship
 - What else?

Two-Way Communication

- Ideas for Two– Way Communication
 - Coffee breaks
 - Home visits
 - Emails
 - Phone home
 - My rule of thumb: 10 to 1
 - What else?

Degree of Engagement

- Parent Policy Council/PTA great first steps
- “Beyond the Bake Sale” / “Parent Connection” / “101 Real Ways” activities
- Ideas for Engaging more families
 - Projects
 - Projects
 - Did I mention projects?
 - What can we do better questions?
 - What else?

Support for Learning at Home

- Involvement in the academic lives of kids
- Connect the learning to Common Core Standards because it's what we teach and test
- Model what you want/show parents how

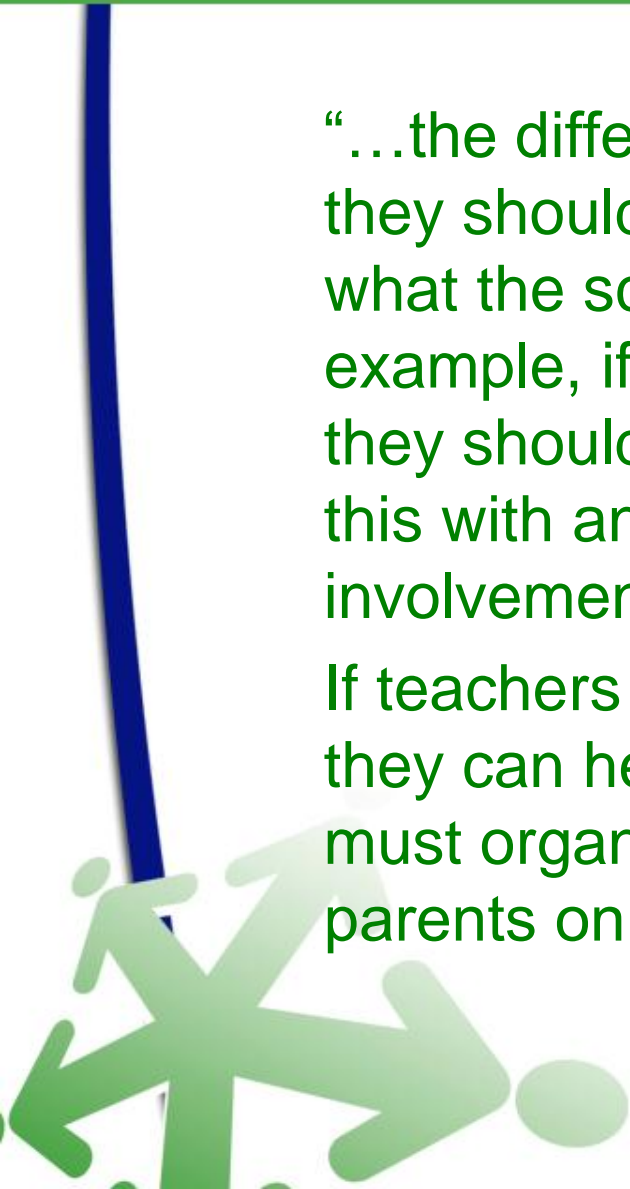

We Need to Show Parents How

“...the differences in whether parents believe they should help or can help are shaped by what the school and the teachers do. For example, if teachers want parents to think that they should help, teachers must demonstrate this with an active program of parent involvement in learning activities at home.

If teachers want parents to feel confident that they can help, teachers and administrators must organize and conduct workshops for parents on how to help.”
